
The New South Australian Employment Tribunal – What does it mean for you?

A series of three workshops in the first half of 2018 focused on key issues in managing staff

A major ongoing expense for Councils is staff and the management of those staff, as an essential part of ensuring Council operations run smoothly.

KelleyJones Lawyers presents a series of informative, interactive workshops for council CEO's, Directors (or equivalent) and HR Managers to explore the new and growing role of the South Australian Employment Tribunal, the management of termination of employment and unfair dismissals and the requirements for effective, practical performance management.

This session is prepared for Council CEO's, Directors and HR Managers.

Seminar Information

As part of each workshop, a detailed paper will be provided, setting out the basis of the law relating to the area of discussion.

A major part of each session will be an interactive workshop, in which one or more workplace scenarios will be explored and the issues identified and explained. The workshop will be facilitated by Chris Morey, a senior and experienced workplace relations lawyer, and Rick Manuel, SA's most experienced workplace relations barrister.

The workshops will focus on realistic case study or studies, based within a council employment situation. Each participant will be encouraged to be involved and contribute, with guidance and recommendations from the facilitators.

The first session will focus on the new and expanded role of the South Australian Employment Tribunal, how the jurisdiction has changed and what impact this has on managing workplace disputes.

The second session will focus on termination of employment, stepping through the requirements with practical, sensible, strategies to ensure a smooth process and reduced unfair dismissal claims when dismissal of an employee is necessary.

The third session will look at practical, effective ways to appropriately performance manage staff, reducing stress and providing better outcomes both for staff and the Council.
