
Social Media – keeping updated in a rapidly changing world

Social Media has taken over as the key communication tool in our modern society

The Internet first arrived in 1969. It was not until the early 2000's that social networking sites made an appearance. Now, these sites are an integral part of modern-day culture, so much so that 'fear of missing out' about something important has become a legitimate issue. Social media is now a permanent and obvious presence in both work and personal lives.

KelleyJones Lawyers is offering an exclusive recording of our Social Media session aimed at all Council officers and employees, exploring the impact of social media on the workplace, the use of social media by councils and the impact of social media as a means of communication to and from council.

About KelleyJones Lawyers

KelleyJones is South Australia's first law firm devoted solely to working with local government. KelleyJones provides dedicated legal, strategic and business support exclusively to South Australia councils and public authorities

Seminar Information

The three-hour session explores the following areas:

- How far can council regulate the use of personal social media by staff, especially out of working hours?
- Can inappropriate use of social media give rise to misconduct?
- Can social media be used to provide evidence of misconduct?
- How does council manage bullying or harassment occurring over social media between staff?
- Who owns or is responsible for council's social media?
- Can council be held liable for comments placed by others on its social media?
- How can council manage communication to/from it via social media?
- How does council manage bullying of staff or elected members by members of the public through social media?
- What rights do people have to say what they want to on social media?
- When do comments on social media become defamatory?
- What can be done when someone in the council is defamed?

The session is jointly presented by Chris Morey and Chris Woodard.

Chris Morey is an experienced senior lawyer, with over 18 years working within employment law and workplace relations, commercial law and litigation.

Chris Woodard has over 8 years of experience working within property, intellectual property, and commercial law and litigation.

Recording licence and In-House sessions

The recording is provided with an unrestricted, non-exclusive, licence to purchasing councils to use for its in-house purposes.

We are also more than happy to discuss providing the session as a live in-house seminar.

If you would like to find out more, please contact Chris Morey at cmorey@kelledyjones.com.au or on 8113 7111.

Pricing

$595 (excl. GST) per recording (for Councils who have previously booked at least one person into a live session).

$845 (excl. GST) per recording (for Councils who have not attended a live session).

3 hours in duration

Purchasing

To purchase, please email info@kelledyjones.com.au or Phone: 08 8113 7100